

Philosophy

We are here because there is no other refuge, finally, from ourselves. Until a person confronts himself in the eyes and hearts of others, he is running. Until he suffers them to share his secrets, he has no safety from them. Where else but in our common ground can we find such a mirror?

Here together, we can at last take root and grow. Not as the giant of our dreams or the dwarf of our fears, but as a person, part of a whole, with a share in its purposes. Not alone anymore, as in death, but alive in ourselves and others.

The Richard S. Csandl Recovery House

The Richard S. Csandl Recovery House offers a supportive living environment for people in recovery from drug and alcohol addiction, based on a 3/4 way model. A 3/4 way home allows for more autonomy than a halfway house, but not the total responsibility of independent living. The house was created to facilitate recovery for individuals completing treatment and in need of minimal structure. All residents must be in verifiable aftercare, pay rent, and abide by the house rules of drug and alcohol abstinence and non-violence. The Recovery House provides a safe environment where individuals can concentrate on their recovery and aftercare plans. Residents become involved in the supportive and healing effects of sharing hope, faith, and inspiration with others in recovery. The Recovery House is democratically run and self-supported, with a house manager who resides on-site—acting in a supervisory, facilitative capacity.

The Recovery House offers living accommodations for 10 residents.
